Since young I had the privilege to attend church and Sunday school. I learnt much about Christianity and even believed there was a hell reserved for sinners, a heaven for Christians, and how Christ could come again anytime. However, I did not regard myself as a sinner who needed Christ.

It was March 2021 and I was in university third year. I came across a YouTube video interpreting the bible about how Jesus could come again in the next few months. The video was posted around four months ago, and I thought to myself that should their interpretation be correct Jesus could actually come again now. I realised I was in deep trouble of my unaccounted sins should Jesus come again anytime, and couldn't yet brush it aside. Recognising how only Jesus could save a sinner like me, I accepted Christ.

For the next few weeks I had trouble sleeping upon being reminded how Jesus could suddenly come again, but assured myself that my sins have already been forgiven. At times I also felt happy knowing the eternal bliss in Christ which awaits me.

After my conversion, I became more sensitive of how I used God's name, avoiding exclamations like; "Oh my god", altogether.

I have also begin to take interest in the Bible reading it to find out more about God and how I should live my life.

Also, I started praying more often bringing before the Lord anything on my mind, confident that He now hears me through Jesus the Son.

Finally, in my Christian walk thus far I have realised how willful sins could sever my relationship with Jesus and weaken my faith significantly. May God grant me the strength to live the rest of my life in obedience to Him.
